Raja Krishnadevarai used to celebrate Holi festival with great pomp and show which included the selection of the 'greatest fool' of the kingdom. In the joyous atmosphere of Holi festival many cultural and humorous items were part of celebrations. The king announced the 'Greatest Fool Award'. It was a very valuable award and people used to act in the funniest manner to deserve this award and the title. However, it was Tenaliram, the person with all intelligence and wit, who used to bag away this award. The other courtiers used to get irritated with this. They were always on the lookout to score a point over Tenali but he never allowed them to do so.

Once when the festival of colours came closer, the jealous courtiers decided to prevent Tenaliram from attending the function. They bought over Tenaliram's pet servant and gave an ample dose of Bhang to Tenali, due to which Tenali got up late in the noon. He dressed up and reached the venue of the function.

As Tenali entered the tent, the king spotted him and shouted at him in anger, "Hey you fool, Tenali! How could you forget the time of the function? Were you drugged to sleep and you acted so foolishly?"

All the courtiers were glad to see how Tenali was going to be insulted by the king. But Tenaliram was unaffected and he said, "You are right, Your Majesty! I am not only a fool but the greatest fool!"

"Yes Tenali! You are really the greatest fool!" the king roared in rage. "Thanks a lot, Your Highness!" replied a beaming Tenali, "Now you have yourself announced me as the greatest fool. Please give me the award also!"

All the courtiers were confused. Even the king could not help uttering "Tenali! You are very intelligent. You have a flair for converting your shortcoming into your strength by your superior logic!" and the king had to award Tenaliram that year also with the award of 'The Greatest Fool.'

One of the very famous Indian writers in English language, R. K. Narayan was born in the year 1906 in Madras. His father was a school headmaster, and Narayan did some of his studies at his father's school. As his father's job required frequent transfers, Narayan spent most of his childhood under the care of his maternal grandmother. During this time, his best friends and playmates were a peacock and a mischievous monkey.

Narayan's grandmother taught him arithmetic, mythology, classical Indian music and Sanskrit. According to his youngest brother, R.K.Laxman, the family mostly conversed in English, and grammatical errors on the part of Narayan and his brothers were frowned upon. While living with his grandmother, Narayan studied at a succession of schools in Madras. He was an avid reader and his literary diet included great literates like Dickens, Woodhouse, Doyle and Thomas Hardy. When he was twelve years old, Narayan participated in a pre-independence march for which he was scolded by his uncle.

Narayan moved to Mysore to live with his family when his father was transferred there. The well-stocked library at the school, as well as his father's own, fed his reading habit, and he started writing as well. After completing high school, Narayan failed the university entrance examination and spent a year at home reading and writing; subsequently passed the examination in 1926.
